

CUERVO
CUERVO

Cuervo Cuervo is the meeting of the minds of Argentinian charango player Agustin Ganem and American producer and multi instrumentalist Benjamin Hill.

After a chance meeting on the streets of Bacalar in 2018, they joined forces to create a unique fusion of psychedelic electronic music fused with Latin American folk and live improvisation. They are known for electrifying live performances featuring virtuosic displays of musicianship, tasteful electronics, live looping, and a capacity for improvisation and collaboration. Ganem combines his mastery of South American charango and guitar with live looping, while Hill fuses North American electronic music with the folk influences of lapsteel guitar and classic Latin percussion elements such as caxixi and bongo. No two live performances of Cuervo Cuervo are ever alike – each is a unique improvisational dialogue between the two that is created directly on the spot for each audience.

Cuervo Cuervo's first self-titled, self-released album was released with support from tastemaker Andrés Oddone's Cassette Blog in October of 2019. They have since self-released a number of EPs, as well singles on compilations through Fertil Discos (Argentina), Cosmovision, and Ritmos del Sur, and been solicited to create remixes for international producers worldwide like El Remolón (Argentina), Scott Nice (US), LŪKA (US), and Xique Xique (France). They currently have a new full length album, an EP on Resueño (Guatemala), an EP with Sophie of Guacayo (Germany), a remix for Fer Hansenson and a number of singles on compilations including one from label Camel Riders; all slated to be released in the coming year.

To date, Cuervo Cuervo has played 100s of shows at venues and festivals across Mexico, Argentina, Guatemala, Europe and the United States.

2024 in particular has been a big year for the project, with ambitious tours across Mexico and Europe that included a number of sold out shows in Berlin and performances at festivals such as Bahidorá in Mexico, Fusion, Zugvogel, and Bucht der Träumer in Germany, and Planet Magika and Ozora in Hungary.
